Quaid As A Hero in History

Every nation has its national champions. The champion is a hero who has exceptional qualities with his selfless and sincere accomplishments. He can change the fate and destiny of the nation. A champion is an example of courage and enthusiasm. His/her messages urge people to devotion and sacrifice.

A hero knows how to make policies to get achievements. A hero has the unimaginable power to defeat the enemy. He prefers his people over anything else. He listens to their problems and works hard for their welfare.

Our history is full of great leaders. Quaid e Azam is one of them. He was born in Karachi on 25 December 1876. His father was a merchant. He linked to a well-established family. His father Ponjah Jinnah was a great man. Muhammad Ali Jinnah got his early education in Karachi. His father aimed that his son got a high rank in the world. At the age of sixteen, he went to England and studied law. After their studies, he returned as a barrister and started practice in Karachi. After that, he shifted to Bombay. In a short period, he was known as a good lawyer.

He won many prosecutions with his intelligence and wisdom. In those days the Muslim Indians were struggling for a separate homeland where they could pray and educate their children freely. The Indian Muslims were caught in many problems such as unemployment, illiteracy. At this time Quaid e Azam decided to join the Indian National Congress and started work for the betterment of the Muslims. His political career started in 1909. When he achieved a good rank in the Indian National Congress, he joined the Muslim league in 1913 and organized work for the Hindus and Muslims.

Soon he realized that the Indian Congress was a not well-wisher for the Muslims rights. The Hindus prevailed on all the government and non-government positions. They criticized and mocked them. The condition of the Muslims was very bad and they treated them in a humiliating way. This condition was unbearable for Our Hero. Then he concluded that working with the Indian National Congress is useless. So he left Congress and started work for the growth of the Muslims.

The Quaid e Azam infused a new life into the Muslims and teach them how to live and work freely. His sincere and devoted feelings furnished their willpower towards Quaid's mission. He awakened the Muslims from the brutal slavery of the Hindus. He advised for the motherland where they could live freely without any hesitation, where they enjoy their rituals and norms according to their culture and religion.

"Eternity prepares heroes but dissolves celebrities".

At last, the Muslims finally got their homeland after the millions of people's sacrifices under the influence of the great leader Quaid e Azam. Pakistan came into being on the world map on 14 August 1947. Quaid e Azam was the first governor-general of Pakistan.

Due to the work hard he lost his health and became ill. He died on 11 September 1948. He will always live in our hearts as the father of the nation.

"Heroes never die".
